The Authenticity, Choice, and Technology Lab

View video about Lab

Research Projects

The ACT (Authenticity, Choice, and Technology) Lab is looking for research assistants (for credit or unpaid) to work with Sheena Iyengar of the Columbia Business School over the semester and beyond. Sheena works in social psychology and specializes in subjects such as innovation, authenticity, and how choice influences decisions and perceptions. Research candidates should be prepared to assist on projects in various capacities (running participants in studies, summarizing papers, gathering literature and other topical information, and helping with study design). We are very interested in bright minds, willing to seriously engage with and contribute to theoretical development. Please submit a resume/CV and tell us why you are interested in this position. Materials can be sent to ACT Lab Manager Sean Kaczmarek: stk2133@columbia.edu.

Contact Information

Contact	Role	Email
Shraman Sen	Lab Manager	ss5158@columbia.edu