

The Neurocognition, Early Experience and Development (NEED) lab at Teachers College, Columbia University, directed by Dr. Kimberly Noble, is seeking volunteer research assistants to assist with a national clinical trial of poverty reduction with children and families. We are looking for individuals who can commit 10 hours per week. Some weekend involvement (1-2 days per month) is expected.

Requirements:

Must be bilingual English-Spanish.

Must have experience working with young children and families.

Must be able to commit two semesters

Research experience preferred.

True bilingualism (unaccented in either language) preferred.

This is a great opportunity to get research experience and mentorship.

Independent study or thesis credit is possible.
