

Overlapping Courses

Credit toward the major will not be given for any course that overlaps significantly the content of a course previously taken. For instance, you will not receive credit for two courses—one at Columbia and one at Barnard—whose content largely overlaps. The following table identifies a number of such courses.

The fact that two courses overlap does not mean that they are equivalent in content, or that they may be applied to the same major requirements. If you wish to use Barnard courses toward a psychology major requirement please refer to the table of Barnard Courses Approved for the Psychology Major.

* This Columbia course is not currently being offered.

** PSYC 2460 overlaps with both BC2175 and BC2177; however, students may count both BC2175 and BC2177 toward the major, provided the 9-point limit on Barnard/transfer courses has not been reached.

This table does not exhaust the possibilities of overlapping courses. If you have questions about overlap with a Barnard course not shown above, please provide your program advisor with a copy of the Barnard syllabus.
